Text: Ephesians 6:1-10

Dr. Stephen Burrell

- It is proper and good for children to render obedience to their parents.
- The rendering of obedience to one's parents is not simply a social convention, but it is a duty that is to be rendered to God.
- To honor is more than to obey. It is to respect and esteem. It is "the form love assumes towards those who are placed above us by God".
- Do not provoke your children to anger.
- Provoke to anger - a state of perpetual resentment.
- The father is held accountable by God as the one who is responsible for teaching the children and for being the disciplinarian of the children.
